

Listen To Me

new single / video release from Sacre Noir

dark and moody female fronted electronica

The debut single from Sacre Noir's forthcoming third LP is a twisted piece of blues meets electronica with a back drop of 80s gothic. Listen To Me was recorded by the band at their very own savage studios, mixed by the band with Leonora Winstanley and mastered by Gary Lowe for Boogs Music. The accompanying video has been produced in collaboration with MeltedBeetle to create a new vision of Sacre Noir's disturbed world.

Filmed on location at Edinburgh's recently reborn La Belle Angele nightclub, the video combines elements of silent movies and horror films from years gone by; a new canvas on which to paint the characters of Sacre Noir. Inspired by the eerie events hidden in the underground cellars of Edinburgh's Old Town, Listen To Me stares through the looking-glass into the bands twisted existence.

This new single sees Sacre Noir lean more heavily on their 'rock' songwriting roots than previous releases. Listen To Me manages to deliver a heavy stomp with modern blues instrumentation and style, whilst staying true to their trademark cinematic, fx-loving electro tilt familiar to fans. .

There will be a limited physical pressing of the single (CDR) which will be given to those in attendance at the launch parties. The track will be made available on the Sacre Noir Official Website via Savage Recordings and is due to feature on the 3rd LP (release date Autumn 2015).

The video for Listen To Me features on the Sacre Noir YouTube page. Special thanks to Stephen Young @ MeltedBeetle, Erin Culley Make-Up Artist, our actors Steve & Lyndsey and to everyone else who helped to bring this project to life.
